The 72 Angels of the Divine Name, also known as the 72 Shemhamphorasch Angels, are a group of powerful beings that occupy a prominent place in the angelic hierarchy of Western esotericism. These angelic entities serve as intermediaries between the celestial realms and the mortal world, carrying out the divine will and assisting those who seek their aid. Their names are derived from the 72-letter name of God, known as the Shemhamphorasch, which is found in the Old Testament book of Exodus.

Origins and History

The concept of the 72 Angels of the Divine Name has its roots in ancient Hebrew mysticism and the Kabbalistic tradition. The first known written mention of these angels appears in the Sefer Raziel HaMalakh, an ancient magical text attributed to the archangel Raziel. This text, which dates back to the 7th century CE, provides detailed descriptions of the 72 angels, their attributes, and their roles in the angelic realm.

Over the centuries, the 72 Angels of the Divine Name have been adopted by various Western esoteric traditions, including Hermeticism, Thelema, and Rosicrucianism. Each tradition has its own unique interpretation of these angelic beings, but they are generally regarded as powerful intermediaries who can be invoked for assistance in a wide range of matters, such as healing, protection, and spiritual growth.

Attributes and Powers

Each of the 72 Angels of the Divine Name has its own unique set of attributes and powers. These attributes are often reflected in their names, which typically have a Hebrew origin and carry symbolic meanings. For example, the angel Metatron, whose name means "He who stands behind the throne," is known as the angel of presence and the guardian of the heavenly throne.

The powers of the 72 Angels of the Divine Name are vast and varied. They can be invoked for assistance in a wide range of matters, including:

- Healing and protection
- Spiritual growth and enlightenment
- Manifestation and abundance
- Love and relationships

- Career and finance
- Protection from evil and negative energies

The Hierarchy of the 72 Angels

The 72 Angels of the Divine Name are arranged in a hierarchical structure, with each angel having a specific rank and function within the angelic realm. The highest-ranking angels are the archangels, who are followed by the angels, principalities, powers, virtues, dominions, thrones, cherubim, and seraphim.

Each of these ranks has its own unique set of responsibilities and duties. The archangels, for example, are responsible for carrying out the most important missions of God, while the seraphim are known as the "burning ones" and are said to be the closest to the divine throne.

Invoking the 72 Angels

The 72 Angels of the Divine Name can be invoked for assistance through a variety of methods, including prayer, meditation, and ritual. Each angel has its own unique invocation, which is typically found in ancient texts such as the Sefer Raziel HaMalakh.

When invoking an angel, it is important to be clear about your intentions and to have a specific purpose in mind. You should also be respectful and humble, and avoid using the angels for selfish or harmful purposes.

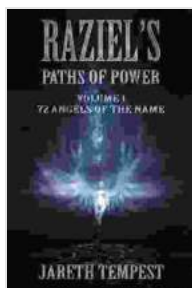

The 72 Angels of the Divine Name are a powerful and benevolent force in the universe. They can be invoked for assistance in a wide range of matters, and they can provide guidance, protection, and support on our journey through life. By understanding the attributes and powers of these angelic beings, we can deepen our connection to the divine and manifest our highest potential.
