David Fine, the man known as "He Just Bull," was a legendary bullfighter and rodeo clown who left an unforgettable mark on the world of bull riding. With his daring stunts, infectious enthusiasm, and unwavering determination, Fine captivated audiences for decades and became an icon in the sport.

Early Life and Career

David Fine was born on January 11, 1959, in Petaluma, California. He developed a keen interest in bullfighting at a young age, and began his career as a rodeo clown in the early 1980s. Fine quickly gained recognition for his fearless stunts and ability to control and redirect angry bulls.

The Birth of "He Just Bull"

In 1987, Fine was invited to perform at the Professional Bull Riders (PBR) World Finals in Las Vegas. It was here that he debuted his now-famous catchphrase, "He just bull." The phrase became synonymous with Fine's fearless approach to bullfighting and his ability to control even the most dangerous bulls.

Signature Stunts

Fine was known for his signature stunts, which pushed the boundaries of human daring and control. One of his most famous stunts was the "figure eight," where he would guide a bull in a figure-eight pattern inside the arena. He also performed the risky "baseball slide," where he would slide between the bull's legs and onto its back.

Bullfighter to Rodeo Icon

As Fine's reputation grew, he became more than just a bullfighter. He evolved into a full-fledged rodeo icon, hosting his own television show, "He Just Bull," and serving as a commentator for PBR events. Fine's infectious enthusiasm and knowledge of the sport made him a fan favorite and respected figure in the bull riding community.

Philanthropic Work

Beyond his accomplishments in rodeo, Fine was also known for his philanthropic work. He established the David Fine Foundation to support aspiring athletes and provide scholarships to young bull riders. Fine's foundation continues to make a positive impact on the lives of young people in the rodeo community.

Legacy and Influence

David Fine's legacy extends far beyond his own career as a bullfighter. His daring stunts and innovative techniques influenced a generation of bullfighters and rodeo clowns. His catchphrase, "He just bull," became a symbol of courage and determination, not only in the world of bull riding but also in life.

Tragic Death

On June 29, 2019, David Fine tragically passed away at the age of 60 after a long battle with cancer. His death was a profound loss to the bull riding community and the world at large.

David Fine, known as "He Just Bull," will forever be remembered as a legendary figure in the world of bull riding. His fearless stunts, infectious enthusiasm, and philanthropic work left an enduring legacy that continues to inspire and amaze audiences today. Fine's contributions to the sport and his impact on the lives of others make him a true icon in the annals of rodeo history.
