The author, Loung Ung, was only five years old when the Khmer Rouge regime took over Cambodia. In the years that followed, she and her family were subjected to unimaginable horrors. They were forced to work in labor camps, witnessed countless executions, and were constantly on the verge of starvation. Loung's parents and two of her siblings were killed during this time.

Despite the unimaginable suffering she endured, Loung never lost hope. She clung to the belief that one day she would be free. And in 1979, when the Vietnamese army liberated Cambodia, Loung's dream finally came true.

After the war, Loung was adopted by an American family and brought to the United States. She struggled to adjust to her new life at first, but eventually she found her place in the world. She went on to earn a college degree and become a successful writer.

In 2000, Loung published Memoirs of a War Child, her memoir of her experiences during the Cambodian genocide. The book was a critical and commercial success, and it has since been translated into over 20 languages.

Memoirs of a War Child is a powerful and moving story of survival and hope. It is a testament to the resilience of the human spirit, and it is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always light to be found.
